

Angela Danovi of Lowell, Arkansas is pleased to be the moderator of the Gone with the Wind panel at the 2014 Marshfield Cherry Blossom Festival. Angela is a lifelong fan of GWTW, having seen the film for the first time in 1986 when she was 8 years old. She spent time during her middle and high school years reading the book, collecting memorabilia, and learning about the history of the actors, the producer, and the making of the film. In 2009, Angela was an attendee to the official GWTW 70th anniversary celebration in Marietta, Georgia. In 2010 Angela began the website Olivia de Havilland - Lady of the Classic Cinema dedicated to the career of GWTW star Olivia de Havilland. In the same year she also began the website Gone with the Wind Showtimes to inform fans about the numerous opportunities to see GWTW in theaters across the United States and around the world. In October 2010, Angela organized a panel of young GWTW bloggers called "Blog with the Wind" in coordination with the St. Louis based event "Gateway to the Wind" planned by author Sally Tippet Rains. Angela is originally from Memphis, Tennessee and is a graduate of the University of Tennessee with a BS in Environmental and Soil Science and an MS in Geography with a focus in water quality. Professionally, Angela works as the Arkansas Projects Manager for Ozarks Water Watch, an Arkansas and Missouri based non-profit focused on the protection of the Upper White River Watershed.
